SCUBA DIVING

Scuba diving is a very fun-filled sport. The equipment you need is: a glass front mask that covers the eyes and nose, diving tank(s), regulator, weights, weight belt, tank harness, fins and if you plan to go deep, a diving suit to keep you warm. Some people think skin diving is going underwater with the equipment I mentioned, but it isn't. Skin diving is when you go down with a snorkle, which means you must keep coming to the top of the water for air. SCUBA diving is taking your air with you, in tanks strapped to your back.

Of course, first you must go through lessons. Sometimes these last more than a month. Besides safety rules these lessons teach you how to use the equipment and how every piece of equipment works. Never let anyone try to teach you to skin dive unless you or your parents know that he is a professional teacher.

When you are able to go down deep you will discover many things. Sunken row boats, original shorelines of lakes, and, sometimes, fish more than 5 feet long or less than 2 inches. If you have an underwater still or movie camera, it is fun to take pictures or movies.

There are two ways of jumping into the water right so you don't get hurt. One: hold your mask and jump in feet first. Two: hold your mask and jump in backwards. Never jump in head first. Before you go down spit in your mask, add a little water and swish it around. Then rinse it out. This is the only way to keep your mask from fogging up while you are diving.

One good rule for safety is; always have a buddy with you, in case you get a cramp. Some people say you can go diving right after you eat. This isn't true. You should still wait an hour.

If you have a spear gun you must be sure the state your diving in allows you to use it. Most states don't. But you can use a knife.

This is a very wonderful sport. I know . . . I go diving, and I hope you will try it.

My hobby is collecting seashells. After I collect the shells I take them home and paint them. The next day when they are dry, I mount them on little round pieces of plastic and make earrings out of them.

The ones that I think come out good, I sell. Sometimes the people that buy my earrings give me a little extra money than what I actually ask for them.
